THINGS TO CRACK GD-PI

- Personal Interview (PI)
Here's the classic opening question in a PI - "Tell me something about yourself. The answer to this question can make or break the interview. Typically, one should talk very briefly about family, education, career goals, hobbies, and interests. Do not talk a lot about the past. Briefly refer to past education, life journey, and future plans.
Another common question is, "Why do you want to do an MBA?" Answer such questions keeping in mind the interviewer's perspective and your own. MBA just has responsibilities of MBA. In 20-30 years you will be in managerial and strategic roles. Remember, post an MBA, one lands a job in a corporate organization where there are opportunities for rapid career growth along with high monetary returns. But at the same time, management as a career is also a challenging profession.

Group Discussion

Read newspapers regularly so that you don't fall short of knowledge on current affairs. You must have complete knowledge of political, economic, social, and Science & Tech issues of recent times.
Enter the discussion at the right point i.e. when others are taking a small pause or have completed their point which you can counter or elaborate on. Be loud and assertive but be polite in explaining your points.
It is not necessary to arrive at a consensus during a GD. Candidates can have different opinions but what is important is concluding the discussion with convincing points and with civility.

Written Ability Test

WAT topics can be as abstract as 'describe the color blue and pink' to something more focused on current trends. So keep reading the news, latest trends, and articles on India's growth stories. Read various types of books and articles. Do not forget to read the editorial sections of newspapers daily.
