INVESTMENT BANKING CAREER PATH

- The Investment banking division (IBD) of an investment bank helps governments, corporations, and institutions raise capital and complete mergers and acquisitions (M&A). An investment banking career is extremely demanding with analysts frequently working 100-hour weeks. The competition for positions is intense, compensation is very high, and the work is very high profile. The tradeoff, however, is long hours, a military-like culture, and a lot of grunt work.
- The IBD of the bank is further divided into industry groups, such as the TMT investment banking group.
